Overview

The "Statistical Report on Awareness and Perception of the Dangers of Irregular Migration in Nigeria 2020" by the Nigeria Bureau of Statistics (NBS) presents a comprehensive analysis of Nigerians' understanding and views regarding the risks associated with irregular migration. Commissioned by the National Commission for Refugees, Migrants and Internally Displaced Persons (NCFRMI) and supported by the International Organization for Migration (IOM), the report aims to provide empirical data to inform policy development and public enlightenment campaigns on safe migration practices. It highlights the critical need for evidence-based interventions to address the growing phenomenon of irregular migration from Nigeria, particularly towards Europe and other African countries.

The report details the findings of a nationwide survey conducted across Nigeria's six geopolitical zones. It examines various facets of awareness, including knowledge of specific dangers like human trafficking, exploitation, and death, as well as the legal and socio-economic consequences. Furthermore, it explores the underlying factors influencing individuals' perceptions, such as economic hardship, search for better opportunities, and the role of social networks and media in shaping migration decisions. The study also identifies demographic variations in awareness levels, pointing to specific groups and regions that may require targeted interventions.

Ultimately, the report serves as a vital resource for government agencies, international organizations, and civil society groups working on migration issues. By quantifying awareness gaps and understanding the drivers of irregular migration, it provides a foundation for designing more effective awareness campaigns, strengthening border management, and implementing socio-economic programs that address the root causes of irregular migration. Its findings underscore the importance of accurate information dissemination and community engagement in mitigating the risks faced by potential irregular migrants.

Key Takeaways

- A significant portion of the Nigerian population demonstrates awareness of the dangers associated with irregular migration, though specific knowledge gaps persist.
- Economic hardship and the search for better opportunities are primary drivers influencing individuals' decisions to consider irregular migration.
- Public enlightenment campaigns must be tailored to address specific demographic groups and regions where awareness of irregular migration dangers is lower.
- Social media and word-of-mouth play a substantial role in shaping perceptions about migration, necessitating targeted digital communication strategies.
- Policy interventions should focus on both increasing awareness of risks and addressing the socio-economic factors that push individuals towards irregular routes.
- There is a clear need for continuous data collection and monitoring to track changes in awareness and perception over time and evaluate the effectiveness of interventions.
- Collaboration between government agencies, international organizations, and local communities is crucial for developing and implementing effective migration management strategies.

Chapter Summaries

Executive Summary

This section provides a concise overview of the report's objectives, methodology, key findings, and policy recommendations. It highlights the prevalence of irregular migration from Nigeria and the critical need to understand public awareness and perception of its dangers. The summary underscores the report's contribution to evidence-based policymaking and intervention design for safe migration.

Introduction and Background

This chapter sets the context for the study, outlining the global and national landscape of irregular migration. It discusses the rationale behind the report, emphasizing the increasing risks faced by Nigerian migrants and the importance of data-driven insights. The chapter also details the report's objectives, scope, and the institutional framework guiding its development.

Methodology

This section describes the research design, sampling strategy, and data collection instruments employed in the survey. It explains the nationwide coverage, the selection of respondents, and the methods used to ensure data quality and reliability. Details on the questionnaire structure, data processing, and analytical approaches are also provided, ensuring transparency and reproducibility.

Awareness of Dangers of Irregular Migration

This chapter presents detailed findings on the levels of awareness among Nigerians regarding the specific dangers of irregular migration. It covers knowledge about human trafficking, sexual exploitation, forced labor, detention, death, and legal consequences. The analysis breaks down awareness levels by demographic characteristics such as age, gender, education, and geographic location.

Perception of Dangers and Drivers of Irregular Migration

This section delves into how Nigerians perceive the severity of irregular migration dangers versus the perceived benefits or drivers. It explores the influence of economic factors, social networks, media, and personal experiences on migration decisions. The chapter also identifies the primary push and pull factors contributing to the desire for irregular migration.

Sources of Information on Migration

This chapter analyzes the various channels through which Nigerians obtain information about migration, both regular and irregular. It assesses the credibility and reach of different sources, including traditional media, social media, community leaders, family, and friends. Understanding these sources is crucial for designing effective information dissemination campaigns.

Policy Implications and Recommendations

Based on the survey findings, this chapter outlines actionable policy recommendations for government agencies and stakeholders. It suggests strategies for enhancing public awareness, strengthening legal frameworks, addressing socio-economic root causes, and improving collaboration among relevant actors to promote safe, orderly, and regular migration pathways.

Conclusion

This final chapter summarizes the main findings and reiterates the significance of the report for national migration management. It emphasizes the ongoing need for data-driven interventions and continuous monitoring to adapt to evolving migration trends and challenges. The conclusion reinforces the commitment to protecting potential migrants from exploitation and harm.
